Many travelers say they were in the brink of reaching awards for big trips when the airlines upped the ante. Most lines have given travelers at least a month's notice to redeem their miles under old award schedules, but many fliers say that is not enough warning.
The airlines, which have periodically tinkered with the award levels, but never on such a sweeping basis, have always re-served the right to change their

Sierra Leone Reports Invasion Threat

FREETOWN, Sierra Leone (Renters) — Troops and armored vehicles were deployed along Sierra Leone's coast after intelligence reports indicated that external forces planned to invade the country, according to sources close to the Defense Ministry.

They could give no further details of the invasion plans, which came four weeks after Sierra Leone's president, Major General Joseph Saidu.

Momoh, foiled an ettempt to overthrow him.

The sources said Saturday that soldiers patrolling Sierra Leone's borders had been increased and guards reinforced at Freetown's main prison, where suspected coup plotters are detained. Momoh loyalists quickly crushed the March 23 coup attempt and more than 30 persons were detained, including a former vice president, Francis Minah.

Castro Holds Forth On Sports and AIDS

Cigarless, in Role of Good Neighbor

By Joseph B. Treaster New York Times Service HAVANA - Shortly after midnight, in the starkly modern Palace of the Revolution, Fidel Castro was presenting himself as the good neighbor.

Harmony with Washington, he said, ignoring years of insult-trading and wars by proxy, "doesn't depend on us."

The first group of American journalists to interview Mr. Castro in a year or so had crowded around him to talk about sports, specifically the Pan-American Games, to be theld in August in Indianapolis. Someone explained that a con-troversy had arisen over the raising of the Cuban flag at a center of the games, a place called American Le-

On the prickly question of whether he, a lifelong sportsman and fan, would like to attend the games, Mr. Castro grinned at the police chief of Indianapolis, Paul A. Annee, who was in the room. "I think it would multiply his work." the Cuban leader said.

The day before, after months of accusations by exiles in the United States of a cover-up, Mr. Castro's government had issued its first extensive report on AfDS in Cuba, reporting that three Cubans had died because of acquired immune deficiency syndrome and that a special isolation unit had been created for the 108 Cubans who have been discovered to be infected by the virus.

Mr. Castro said that he was concerned about AIDS but that the spread of the disease had so far the United States and Cuba are the worst in more than two decades, according to a top Cuban official and Western diplomats.

The freeze that set in late last year bas, among other things, dimmed hopes of Cubans in both countries for increased transit in both directions, a prospect that appeared briefly in 1985.

Cuban officials contrasted the impasse with Washington to gains m breaking out of their diplomatic isolation with democratic nations in Latin America. Brazil, Argentina and Uruguay have opened embassies or increased their representation in Havana in recent months, the officials pointed out.

No single incident brought on the deterioration with the United States, both sides said. Rather, differences accumulated and attempts at dialogue collapsed over the past two years, leaving Cuban officials expressing bitterness and frustration about the lack of progress.

Although nothing had been dis-closed until Friday, he said that for more than a year Cuba had been treating people infected by the AIDS virus with a special diet, which he did not describe, and the experimental drug interferon. Even though as recently as last week Cuban health officials told American journalists that they knew of only one death from AIDS in Cuba, Mr. Castro denied that Cuba had tried to conceal the extent of the disease.

He said that none of the 108 infected Cubans had developed AIDS or symptoms of the disease and that he believed Cuba had been "able to create a protective system" for them.

Mr. Castro said he believed that quarantining the victims in one medical facility, along with testing potential blood donors and Cubans returning from places with relatively high incidence of the disease, had been important in containing it in

He said that the special AIDS unit was in the countryside near Havana and that it looked more like a farm than a hospital. He recalled that during an outbreak of dengue fever, for which Cuba blamed the Central Intelligence Agency, a mandatory quarantine had also been imposed.

Wars in Central America and Africa were not on the agenda as Mr. Castro stood for nearly an hour with the Americans in a small, sparely furnished visitors' room in the palace, where he has his office.

In his new book, Mr. Bonner asserts that American acquiescence to martial law was part of a longterm pattern of the American role in postwar Philippine politics. The book says that role was to bolster leaders who were seen as friendly to Washington regardless of how corrupt or oppressive they were. Mr. Bonner said Mr. Nixon de-

the monthly U.S. trade deficit hits $15 billion; the dollar falls to new lows against the yen; President Reagan succumbs to pressure for retaliation against Japan ... And for the first time, responsible officials like Chairman Paul Volcker of the Federal Reserve openly speculate about a world financial crisis. Is the crash of '87 in the works?

No. A 1929-scale crash followed by a collapse in economic output is highly unlikely. If there were a collapse now, governments would swiftly shore up the banking system and restore consumer purchasing power. What is possible, however, is a plunge in the dollar that triggers a severe recession.

Even if crisis never comes, the international economy could fall into gridlock as debtors cut back on foreign purchases, developed countries stagnate and the world's poor tumble further into poverty. Governments know the risks and agree broadly on steps needed to protect the stressed financial system from breakdown. What is lacking is strong leader-ship to make the tough political decisions to match the new realities of interdependence. Not many years ago America dominated international commerce. Today America shares top billing with Japan and Western Europe, while smaller countries like Sandi Arabia and Brazil have become important actors. Dependence is now mutual.

The big Reagan tax cut of 1981 dramatically increased consumer purchasing power at the expense of domestic saving. That temporarily suited Japan and West Germa-ny, which were delighted to supply the United States with goods and to invest the dollar proceeds. But that sent up the value of the dollar, leaving many American pro-

Each week brings evidence for prophets of ducers uncompetitive and creating yawning economic doom: Brazil defaults on its debt; imbalances in trade. Meanwhile, sharp declines in the price of oil and other raw materials made it almost impossible for developing countries to service their foreign debts. The flow of new capital to Latin America and Africa has stopped, and with it their demand for U.S. goods.

Huge U.S. trade deficits cannot be indefinitely sustained with infusions of foreign capital. Virtually everyone agrees that a continuing stalemate on debt would wreck the Latin economies and destabilize their politics. There is even broad agreement on what must be done to right the economic balance.

Washington must credibly reduce the budget deficit by raising taxes and cutting spending. Efforts to protect U.S. companies from foreign competition must be resisted. Most important, all the economic powers must rethink obsolete growth strategies.

Japan needs to sever the link between prosperity and the growth of exports to America, diverting surplus savings to domestic uses. Europe and Japan must renounce the costly agricultural protectionism that feeds their trade surpluses and depresses world commodity prices. America must take the lead on Latin debt, orchestrating concessions by banks and offering government capital through multilateral lenders.

If the outlines of a fix are clear, what is stopping it? Every reform means pain for someone, and the current generation of leaders lacks the political will to exact it. No one expects overnight solutions to problems a decade in the making. But leaders show little inclination to move in the direction they know is right. Uotil they do, the world economy will remain at great risk.

At Reykjavík, President Reagan fed the European nightmare that the United States is so intent on making its own deal with Moscow that it would leave Europe exposed. That is why, last week in Moscow, George Shultz insisted on interrupting the bargaining and consulting the allies. Even as they demand to be consulted, the Europeans sometimes appear to prefer to be dictated to: It lets them ignore hard choices and heavy costs. But a sound alliance of democracies cuts outside of a context that looks to negotiate down the threat posed by Soviet conventional and chemical advantage. This is sensible. On the strategic level, however, Europe's claims have not yet been adequately adstrategic competition but also any agreement that would offer some sort of nuclear shield or other advantage to the superpowers alone, Europeans want predictability and protection against change, things hard to match. They can best get both by being ready to make their own special contribution to the alliance: improving conventional defense.

Espionage: So What Else Is New?

By Charles Krauthammer

WASHINGTON - Remember the Soviet brigade in Cuba? In 1979, President Carter submitted the SALT-2 treaty to the Senate for ratification. Senator Frank Church, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, discovered a Soviet brigade in Cuba. To meet the "crisis," SALT-2 hearings were postponed. The president was put on the defensive and the atmosphere was poisoned. The treaty was delayed and then sunk by the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan. Then it turned ont that the brigade had been there for 16 years. It was the non-issue of the decade. But it did its damage.

Every decade has its bogus Cuban brigade. Now we have ours: the embassy spy bysteria.

The greatest deliberative body in the world is again in an arms control mood, pushing for treaties — test ban, SDL even a revived SALT-2 — from a weakened president. So a weakened president, desperate to shore himself up politically and within sight of a Euromissile treaty, prepares to dispatch his secretary of state to Moscow for crucial arms control talks. And what happens? The Senate discovers that the Soviets have been spying on the present U.S. Embassy in Moscow and that the new embassy there is riddled with bugs. Shocked, it passes a resolution urging Secretary of State George Shultz to stay home rather than negotiate with such cheaters.

The Soviets called the American reaction to the embassy story "spy hysteria." The Kremlin is not often right. This case is an exception.

Hysteria it is. There is absolutely nothing new here. The Soviets have been building their hilltop, spy-nest Washington embassy for 10 years. Anyone who drives by can see the forest of antennas atop the buildings from which the Soviets can listen in on any conversation they please. It has long been known that the

Gorbachev: Concessions In Advance

By Jim Hoagland

T ONDON - The diplomatic action was in Moscow and Brussels last week as the United States virtually wrapped up negotiations with the Soviet Union to remove medium-range nuclear missiles from Europe. But No. 10 Downing Street is perhaps the best place these days to get a clear understanding of the big movements under way in East-West relations.

A satisfied afterglow remains from Margaret Thatcher's triumphant wells come in Moscow. But it is giving way to hard-nosed analysis of the longterm gains that Mikhail Gorbachev sought by buttering up the Iron Lady and then ostensibly sweeping aside final obstacles to the medium-range agreement in his meetings with Secre-tary of State George Shultz.

Neither act costs Mr. Gorbachev much in real terms. But they also bring him little immediate gain at home and can probably be used against him by hard-line opponents. Why do iff The best hypothesis heard here is that they fit into a determined new effort to get President Reagan into one final arms-control summit where he might agree to limit the testing and development of space-based weapons systems.

By offering concessions in advance in the form of the medium-range missile agreement, and by focusing his highly personalized style of diplomacy on Mrs. Thatcher and Mr. Shultz, Mr. Control by the highest and Mr. Shultz, Mr. Gorbachev appears to be hoping to build up credit to draw on when he confronts Mr. Reagan once again with demands to alter his positions on the anti-ballistic missile treaty and the Strategic Defense Initiative.

Domestically, Mr. Gorbachev is compared to Lenin. Diplomatically, he increasingly resembles Egypt's An-war Sadat, who believed that dramatic gestures and "paying in advance" would eventually compel his negotiatiing adversaries to respond in kind. In wooing Mrs. Thatcher, Mr.

Gorbachev has gained a powerful friend in court in Washington. The British prime minister is seen in Loadon and Moscow as the only leader who has succeeded in reining in the American president on ABM and SDI issues. She would undoubtedly be the most important foreign voice Mr. Reagan would listen to before a ammit with Mr. Gorbachev.

There is no suggestion here that the Moscow welcome will in any way influence her own positions on arms control or other matters of substance. But, as one of her advisers noted, Mr. Gorbachev "played fair with her, and it will stand him in good stead."

That is, it has filtered down to officials here that Mrs. Thatcher came home persuaded that Mr. Gorbachev is sincerely seeking to lower tensions with the West and that his proposals deserve serious consideration.

That feeling (and the divisions of public opinion at home on nuclear weapons) helped neutralize what could have been a negative British government reaction to the "zero op-non" agreement on medium-ranged rockets that Mr. Shultz presented to NATO foreign ministers in Brussels.

Mr. Gorbachev's lavish hospitality for Mrs. Thatcher also underlines a striking rearrangement of Soviet priorities in Western Europe. While warmly embracing Mrs. Thatcher, he has turned a cold shoulder to French Prime Minister Jacques Chirac, who was due to visit Moscow oext month. Mr. Chirac is almost certain to postpone that trip. The Russians have failed to agree to the dates proposed by the French and made clear that Mr. Chirac would not get anything like the triumph staged for Mrs. Thatcher.

The contrast provides a final bit of proof that France's once special rela-tionship with the Soviet Union is broken, perhaps beyond repair for years to come. With France persistently and sharply rejecting Mr. Gorbachev's arms control policies and applying the same controls to technology exports as other European countries, the Russians appear to have concluded that they can gain little from keeping it as a privileged interlocutor for Europe.

West Germany has traditionally competed with France for the right to be the Soviet Union's European part-ner in dialogue. But Chancellor Helmut Kohl is mediating within his badly divided government instead of leading it, particularly on arms control matters. Bonn's positions are seen as mushy and not likely to influence Washington on the issues that still hold Mr. Gorbachev's attention, Mr. Gorbachev has therefore abandoned the notion of the "Europeans" forming a cohesive bloc on security matters, and is concentrating instead on Mrs. Thatcher, the one leader who can influence Mr. Reagan and who has both the national support and the temperament to pursue radical new courses if she decides to.

Holy Week Reminders

over, was a time to think of renewal and freedom, as good a week as any to believe anew that faith can move mountains. In a cathedral in Cape Town and in a mansion in Moscow, people who gathered for reli-gious services seemed to believe it.

The service in South Africa was convened to do precisely what the government had just forbidden: protest the detention without trial of thousands of South Africans. Black and white, Jew and Christian, with the American ambassador joining in some 800 protested the state of emergency that has put an estimated 30,000 in jail.

"My plea is for you to rise up and revolt against this ban," said Allan Boesak, president of the World Alliance of Reformed Churches. "This is not the madness of just one man; this is the madness of a government which has long ago lost all legitimacy and can only live out its last days compounding the evil it has begun."

Police gave the protest a wide berth. The government seemed to soften slightly. It had not intended to outlaw prayer in a bona fide religious service, an official said. But reli-

Holy Week, the week of Easter and Pass- gious leaders did not intend to stop there, either. They urged the congregation to take the protest beyond the cathedral walls. "If these actions, undertaken in obedience to God's demand, lead to possible charges and imprisonment, so be it," said one.

On the same day, some 50 "refuseniks," long denied permission to leave the Soviet Union, joined in a Passover seder in the home of the U.S. ambassador in Moscow, They celebrated the feast of emancipation, these men and women, many of them only recently freed from prison or exile. Secretary of State George Shultz joined them, an Episcopalian in a white yarmulke. He had brought kosher food and wine from America, and gifts: a handsomely bound copy of the seder ritual for one guest, a picture of another's grandchildren in America. "You are on our minds," he told them.

Two governments denying liberty and justice. Many faiths, asserting that such mjustice must be opposed. In this Holy Week of 1987, these were heartening reminders of the strength, and warmth, of religion enlisted in the service of freedom. - THE NEW YORK TIMES.

What About Eastern Europe?

It is an evil empire. President Reagan was and is right. Not having been on the other side of the Iron Curtain for some 30 years, I had forgotten what Russia has done to Eastern Europe. A visit to Poland is a chastening reminder. It is like going back to the Middle Ages. No progress has been made since I was last here in 1955.

The country gives the impression of hav-ing been frozen forever into the drab patterns of postwar austerity: few goods in the shops, no paint on the cracked and peeling buildings, no signs of animation in the streets, and, as for the countryside, only the occasional ancient horse and plough. Even in the main tourist botels, washbasin plugs are often either missing or attached by sodden string, and one is lucky to find a bit of jam for breakfast. The most flyblown African country is better off than Poland. And it truly is all Russia's fault for imposing and sustaining Communist govern-ments which stifle every form of free and legitimate economic activity. This Russian-imposed desolation is a crime against humanity. If there is a bargain to be done with Mikhail Gorbachev, should not the West at least try to make sure that Eastern Europe is included among the beneficiaries? Poland is dying through economic strangulation. Its death throes, in the form of Solidarity, are noble and moving. But admiring the death throes is no excuse for having done absolutely nothing to avert the destruction of a fine and ancient nation.

WASHINGTON - Steven Einhorn should be sitting atop the world. For months the chief investment strategist at Goldman, Sachs & Company has said that stocks would go higher. Others might barbor doubts, but not Mr. Einhorn. He plastered his clients with facts and figures, but his message was simple: The bull market endures.

And so it has. The market has just dropped sharply, but the decline has been from an all-time high. In general the metaphor has rarely seemed so apt. The bull has rumbled over anything that might disturb its advance: Irangate, the insider-trading scandal, gyrating oil prices. The first-quarter gain of the Dow Jones industrial average (23.2 percent) was the second best since World War II. Since the summer of 1982, stock values have nearly tripled. The market has made

It makes me feel like a moron. The biggest bull market since World War II begs for meaning beyond the stock statistics. I wish I could supply it.

Having purged inflation's excesses, is America launched into greater prosperity? Or has the market gone mad? It is one or the other - or something in between. Don't look to Wall Street for insight. Even the sober market analyses, like Mr. Ein-lot of the rest is, well, gibberish. The market's latest guru, Robert Prechter, predicts a 3600 Dow. He embraces the Elliott wave. It is mysticism to me. The theory, says Barron's, holds "that the stock market zigzags up in five waves, three up and two corrective moves down. It then is supposed to turn down for three waves, the middle one of which is an upside correction. This pattern ... is repeated three times, culminating in a major three-wave correction." Got it? Of course, lower inflation and interest rates are the basic causes of the stock and bond market rallies. A 30year Treasury bond issued in 1981 at 15.2 percent and worth $1,000 is now worth more than $1,600 because the market interest rate has fallen to 8.3 percent. Stock prices rise for the same reason. A given stream of profits and dividends justifies a higher price.

But there is more to the rally than that. Mr. Einhorn thinks stock prices may be 25 percent higher than lower interest rates alone would justify. Why? My favorite theory is the reform of U.S. management. The stock market puts a value on corporate America. Managers are being forced - by foreign competition, deregula-born's, hristle with arcane ratios. A tion, hostile takeovers - to do better with what they have. Therefore their companies are worth more. Future profits will be higher. So will living standards. Greater efficiency will enable companies to raise wages with-

This wonderful theory promises a bright future, and it might happen. There is great ferment in U.S. business; all the "restructuring" attests to that. Companies are already paying more to shareholders, mostly by buying back stock. The buybacks boost stock prices and imply higher future per share profits. The buybacks also mean that managers are keeping less cash for wasteful diversification. Some Wall Street firms predict big profit rises. By 1988, Salomon Brothers thinks, the reported earnings of the Standard & Poor's 500 compa jump 57 percent from 1986 levels.

Sadly, this evidence is weaker than seems. Government productivity statistics show that the annual average gain in business efficiency in America in the 1980s (1.3 percent) is about double the rate of the late 1970s, but still lousy. The gains in profits, even if they materialize, would be complicated by tax and accounting technicalities that make them seem bigger than they are.

So maybe I am back where I started. What sustains the market? Dare I mention that dirty word, speculation? The theory of the greater fool has a venerable history on Wall Street. It is all right to buy at an unrealistic price today as long as you sell at a higher unrealistic price tomorrow. When a market boom is in full swing -almost any market boom — there are apparently sensible causes for its continuation that in retrospect seem idiotic. Crowd psychology is anesthetizing, and speculation is obvious only with hindsight. How much the herd mentality has driven the stock market is un-speculation, but they are a special case. More disquieting is the wishful tenor of much Wall Street commentary. It grasps for explanations of a boom that seems too good to be true. Excess "liquidity" is said to propel the market, as if the Federal Reserve were pumping the economy full of money that pushed up stock prices. That is silly. The Fed is not following a reckless credit policy. Borrowing costs re-main relatively high. Interest rates ex-ceed any estimate of inflation.

I should feel consumed by guilt. A columnist gets paid to be authoritative. "I don't know" is a phrase banned from his typewriter. But I am as befuddled as anyone. The market's recent decline is unsetting. The stock market is surely a metaphor for the 1980s. But of solid gain or illusionary excess? Let us hope that the world's Steven Einhorns are right, but a part of me worries that they are not The Washington Post.

7 Are Slain In Ethnic Fighting in Pakistan

 cp^{gch}

KARACHI, Pakistan - Four persons were killed in a fresh out-break of ethnic rioting in Karachi on Sunday, raising to seven the death toll since trouble began Saturday night, doctors said.

The police confirmed five deaths and said they had arrested more than 20 persons during fighting between the Pathan and Muhajir erbnic communities.

Pathans, originally from northvest Pakistan and Afghanistan, have a long history of rivalry with the Muhajirs, Urdu-speaking Moslems who came to Pakistan after the partition of the Indian subcontinent in 1947. The doctors, who had earlier reported three persons dead in clashes Saturday night, said four more persons had died Sunday in a gunfight between members of the two communities in a Karachi suburb.

The police said the trouble began when armed Pathans attacked Mu-

Soviet SS-20s Were First Step

The debate on missiles in Eu-

Mobile. concealable, and armed with three nuclear warheads, the SS-20, with a range of up to 3,000 miles (4,850 kilometers), threatened all of Western

For European members of the North Atlantic Treaty Organization, the SS-20 raised questions about the effectiveness of the American nuclear umbreila.

If the Soviet Union attacked them, could they be certain the United States would commit its strategic arsenal to their defense and risk destruction of its own territory?

Henry A. Kissinger suggested in a 1979 speech that the answer

The NATO response to the threat was its "rwin-track" deci-sion of 1979. It would deploy 108 Pershing-2 missiles and 464 ground-launched cruise missiles as a European-based countermeasure to the SS-20. At the same time, NATO said it would forego the deployment if the Soviet Union agreed to dismantle its SS-20s.

Moscow declined, and the NATO deployment began at the end of 1983. With the buildup continuing. NATO has at least 316 cruise and Pershing-2 missiles compared with 441 SS-20s.

But at their summit meeting in lceland last year. President Ronald Reagan and Mikhail S. Gorbachev tentatively agreed to diate-range missiles from Europe, retaining 100 warheads on each side in Alaska and the Far

Now the Europeans are oervous again. They fear that if President Reagan accepts Mr. Gorbachev's proposals, they will be deprived of a relatively cheap and left vulnerable to the Soviet Union's oumerical superiority in conventional weapon

And, as in the 1970s, they are worrying sotto voce whether they can trust the United States to defend them with its strategic arsenal - incloding ouclear weapons carried aboard submaington agrees to withdraw weapons deployed in Europe.

For the Europeans, mediumand shorter-range missiles are central to the disarmament debate. For the United States, an agreement on intermediate or shorter-range missiles is but a step on the long road toward a possible accord on the longer-

Until that day comes, Britain and France say, there is oo question of negotiating away their independent puclear strike forces, which are considered to be strategic rather than part of the strictly European balance.

rific; he leads gently." At the Good Friday commemoration inside the abbey church, Mr. vanden Elzen said one important point for a visitor to realize was that the gathering of more than 200 faithful who joined in prayer and song with the abbey's 30 monks were mainly the "strict" Catholics, middle-class family people in good standing with church regulations.

Thus Berne Abbey could be seen on this critical church weekend of rebirth as far from ostracized by mainstream laymen. In prayer, in silence, with heads bowed together with the white-robed monks, the faithful presented a scene crowded with the noncontroversial hopes of centuries-old tradition.

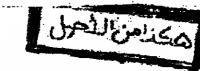

"Thou spoke to us in our deepest need: Your body had been broken," read a prayer chosen for the Easter resurrection service. *Think of your Lord until be comes back."

"We have seven centuries of continuous pastoral involvement here. and I think you could say that we know our people," Father Bacten has observed in defending the abbey and its policy of sanctuary from criticism. "No one can accuse us of being unworldly priests."

Intervention, Sharp Words, Holiday Brake Dollar's Fall

By CARL CEWIRTZ

ARIS—Central banks responded forcefully last week to the challenge from markets to put up or shut up by intervening heavily in the foreign exchange market to stabilize the dollar and by stepping up public statements that further depreciation of the dollar is not currently desirable. The reaction was immediate.

After setting a low of 140.25 yen and 1.7950 Deutsche marks following the report of a widening of the U.S. merchandise trade deficit in February, the dollar ended the week at 142.80 yen and 1.8095 DM for only a modest decline on the week The stabilization was helped by the holiday-shortened weeks.

The Fed's decision to hide its support was frustrating to other central banks.

Markets in North America and Western Europe were closed for Good Friday and many European centers will remain closed Easter Monday. Speculators prefer to close out their positions before such a long weekend. Not until Tuesday; then, will it be clear whether markets really believe that a period of exchange rate stability is at hand or whether they will further test the official resolve to hold the line.

The official intervention needed to calm the markets has been substantial. Henry Kaufman, senior economist at Salomon Brothers, noted last week that foreign official holdings of U.S. government securities in custody at the Federal Reserve (an approximate indication of foreign intervention in support of the dollar) have risen nearly $16 billion since the beginning of the year and almost $10 billion in the last two weeks.

It is not to be overlooked that this heavy intervention merely slowed the dollar's decline and, at least so far, has not altered the market's glum view of the dollar's future.

The Salomon figures are not a mirror image of the support of foreign central banks and do not capture what the United States was doing. Informed sources say the Federal Reserve has been very active in the market. Its decision to keep this support hidden is frustrating to other central banks that believe that being seen in the market is almost as important as the amount of money spent supporting the exchange rate.

THE FED'S RELUCTANCE to take overt action, it is assumed, is linked to the rising protectionist sentiment in Congress, where intervention would be viewed as counterproductive to reducing the trade deficit.

But more important to the U.S. Treasury and the Fed last week were signs that the U.S. bond market was beaded into a dangerous tailspin. Not only have Japanese investors ceased purchasing U.S. dollar bonds, investments that are essential if the huge budget deficit is to be financed without a dramatic increase in interest rates, but the Japanese last week began selling some of the dollar bonds they were holding.

A massive sell-off from Japan would create a nightmare for the bond market.

The Japanese, who have suffered substantial losses on their U.S. bond holdings as a result of depreciation of the dollar against the yen, now are seeing even the capital gains on these investments eroded as U.S. interest rates shift upward and bond prices decline: However, a combination of exchange rate stability, reduced selling from Japan and a belief that the economic outlook does not warrant higher interest rates fueled a recovery in the New York bond market late last week that left bond prices and yields about where they were a week earlier.

Prices in the Euroboud market also recouped their early-week losses. But analysts were uncertain whether this was simply professional short-covering before the long weekend or whether investors were returning because of attractive yield levels.

According to Credit Suisse First Boston, the average yield on five-year Eurodollar bonds ended the week at 8.31 percent, or 0.45 percentage point more than comparably dated U.S. government paper. Yields on 10-year Eurobonds of 8.93 percent were 62 basis points over government bonds. A week earlier, the differential over government issues were 23 and 46 basis points, respec-

While it is widely believed that the Japanese and other foreign investors may require more incentive to buy dollar bonds given the prospect for a higher rate of U.S. inflation fueled by the declining dollar, the widening differential in interest rates now is expected to come from a decline elsewhere rather than a further rise in U.S. rates.

West German rates, for example, are expected to be nudged lower this week. The Bundesbank has been supplying the domestic market with one-month money at a rate of 3.8 percent, and should drop that rate this week to at least 3.5 percent, signaling its

TransCanada's Bid Is Spurned

TORONTO - Debt-ridden Dome Petroleum Ltd. has accepted a 5.1 billion Canadian dollar ($3,86 billion) takeover offer from Chicago-based Amoco Corp.

In accepting, Dome spurned a 4.3 billion dollar bid from Torontobased TransCanada Pipelines Ltd., a move that is likely to reopen a debate on foreign ownership of Canada's industries.

But TransCanada said it had not given up its bid to acquire Dome. "We've improved our original proposal and we've told Dome we're still prepared to negotiate," said TransCanada's president. Gerald Maier.

He did not give details of the improved bid and neither Trans-Canada nor Dome spokesmen were available in comment on Mr. Maier's statement.

Dome and Amoco said Saturday they were negotiating a final agree-ment, which is subject to approval by Dome's shareholders, some of its creditors, the courts and federal regulators. A Dome spokesman, David An-nesley, said "the larger portion" of Amoco's bid is for cash, but declined to give a specific figure.

Dome's chairman, Howard Macdonald, said the Amoco agreement offers the best solution to Dome's present problems."

Dome began an ambitious expansion program in the late 1970s. borrowing extensively, but its for-tunes declined sharply in the early 1980s as oil prices sank

Recently, Dome, which is based in Calgary, Alberta, asked its secured lenders to restructure its 4.7 billion dollars in debt under a plan tying repayments to the price of oil.

Mr. Macdonald said Dome beheved the Amoco agreement was good for all Canadians, because it puts Dome's lands in the hands of a mpany that has the knowledge and financial resources to develop them much faster than Dome would have under the restructuring

However, the agreement is likely to provoke strong reaction in Ottawa, where some politicians have that a takeover of Dome by a gas industry to below 50 percent.

Rockwell Braces for Life After B-1

Construction of the B-1 bomber is due to end at Rockwell International Corp. next year.

By Richard W. Stevenson New York Times Service

LOS ANGELES — About a year from now, if all goes as planned, a buge Rockwell international Corp. hangar in the California desert will open its doors and the 100th and final B-1B bomber will roll off the production line into the U.S. strategic

It will be a bittersweet moment for Robert Anderson, who should by then have retired after 14 years as Rockwell's chief executive. And it will be a point of transition for Donald R. Beall, Rockwell's 49-year-old president, who is expected to succeed Mr. Anderson in February. For the last 15 years, Rockwell has been consumed by the B-1, one of the most expensive and controversial military aircraft programs ever. The payoff has been handsome. The B-1 should account for more than a quarter of Rockwell's projected fiscal 1987 sales of $12 billion and a similar percentage of its $700 million-plus in net profit. But nnw, as the program winds down, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Beall keep hearing a single question; What happens to Rockwell after the B-1?

In answering it, both men are eager to minimize the impact of the project on Rockwell's fortunes. "This was a hell of a great company before the B-1 and will be a stronger company should the B-I wind down as presently scheduled," Mr. Beail said.

Their strategy is designed to cope both with the end of the ober program and changes in the military contracting environment. The executives are trans-forming Rockwell from a company largely dependent on big aerospace contracts to one that emphasizes smaller, technology-See ROCKWELL, Page 11

U.S. and Japan Send Envoys to Talk on Tariffs

TOKYO — High-level envoys from the U.S. and Japanese goveruments traveled to each other's capitals on Sunday for talks about trade sanctions the United States has just imposed against Japan. The U.S. trade representative, Clayton K. Yeutter, arrived in Tokyo, while Shintaro Abe, a special envoy of Prime Minister Yasuhiro Nakasone, flew to Washington to ask for the lifting of the sanctions that were announced on Friday.

Mr. Abe, a former foreign minister and a leading contender to succeed Mr. Nakasone, is in meet President Ronald Reagan, Secretary of State George P. Sbultz and congressional leaders. He is expected to ask the United States to lift the 100 percent tariffs on Japanese personal computers.

power tools and color TV sets. The United States set the tariffs in retaliation after accusing Japan of violating an agreement not to sell semiconductors below cost in third countries, and to increase its purchases of U.S. microchips. Mr. Reagan said the tariffs would cover $300 million in annual sales. In Tokyo, Mr. Yeutter is tn meet Harime Tamura, the minister of international trade and industry, and

"There is a lot of self interest in their doing so," he said. "They have a major industry at stake, a major relationship at stake." He added: "Down deep, they know they have not complied" with the semiconductor agreement. Referring to Japan's decision to file an appeal against the tariffs with the General Agreement on

Amid Urging to Trim Budget Deficit, U.S. Cuts Grants and Widens Loans

WASHINGTON - The pressure of the federal budget deficit has inverted the ancient proverb about the right and left hands. Within the U.S. government today, what the right hand taketh away to budget cuts, the left hand giveth in

Even as they have cut federal spending programs, Congress and the Reagan administration have tocreasingly resorted to loans as a deficit-reducing tactic.

As Representative Willis D. Gradison Jr., Republican of Ohio, said, loans are "a technique used during a period of budget stringency to do good things where the cost doesn't show up until later." But one day, the costs will show up, making the budget-balancing task for future governments all the harder. "We are mortgaging our future," said Joseph R. Wright, deputy director of the Office of Management and Budget. President Ronald Reagan proposed last month a major credit reform package designed to make current budgets reflect the "real" costs of federal loan programs. But these efforts face many burdles in a Congress more worried about this year's deficits than those a decade. or more away.

As the deficit has begun to put the squeeze on popular grant and direct aid programs, loan portfolios have ballooned. Last year, Congress cut $15 billion in spending with great difficulty and even greater fanfare. At the same time it gave out or backed nearly $200 villion to loans, three quarters of which didn't show up to the budget. This is because the United States operates on a cash budget. Direct make public policy.

Barry P. Bosworth, an economist, argues that the high cost of the student loan program, most of which goes to assist students from middle- and upper-income families, soaks up most of the money available for educational aid at the federal level and prevents more significant assistance to the genuinely

By the time the government pays a special allowance to banks to make the loans, keeps interest below market rates during times of high inflation, pays the interest while the student is in school, and stretches out repayment periods, more than 30 percent of the face value of the loan is really a federal subsidy, Mr. Bosworth contends. "Congress is finding the student loan very expensive," he said. "But they can't save money in the short run by cutting back on student loans because the effects aren't felt for five or six years, after the next

40 years is the same as a 13 percent to the form of grants. By 1985, the figure had slipped to 42 percent. The percentage of aid awarded in loans rose from 44 to 49 percent during the same period.

The fundamental idea behind the Reagan administration's credit reform legislation is disclosure, or truth in lending.

The measure would require agencies to reveal the "real" cost of loans: the subsidies, such as low toterest rates and easy repayment terms. There is considerable controversy about how the subsidies should be calculated.

Under the bill, Congress would be expected to appropriate the full value of the subsidy annually for each of the approximately 350 different federal loan programs.

Agencies would be required to buy private insurance to cover loan guarantees. The insurance would be the budget equivalent of the "real" cost of loan guarantees. Foe example, Mr. Wright, the U.S. budget director's deputy, said a program that allows less developed countries to purchase grain at low interest rates is 95.1 percent subsidized. The $17.4 billion program of Commodity Credit Corp. loans to farmers is only 2.4 percent

"These programs are treated equally in the budget," he said. "This kind of math makes for bad decisions."

Congress has found that in some cases, boosting loan programs re-duces the budget deficit.

Modest direct loan programs have evolved into larger guaranteed loan programs and have produced budget "savings" because guarantees are not recorded.

Loans with high interest rates have been repaid early, at substantial loss to the government in future ioterest with the money pocketed as savings. And loans are being sold, with the much-discounted sales price chalked up toward reducing the year's deficit.

The whole issue of credit would China since the Communist Party not have come up if there weren't came to power in 1949 was etter than last year's 2 percent. "There is some quickening in the economy," said one senior economist io the administration, "but it is not solid enough to get your bands on. It's the same as we've seen the last two years.

"The basic situation still looks good," he said. "Capital spending plans are up, and employment was up strongly in January and February. But then you hit a weak month like March."

Employment gains last month were scant, retail sales rose only slightly, and industrial production and housing starts both fell.

The administration's uneasiness surfaced in comments last week by James C. Miller 3d, director of the White House Office of Management and Budget, who said he was worried that the Federal Reserve would "overreact" to the possibility of higher inflation and allow mlerest rates to rise.

"My fear is that if we get into a recession we are in deep soup," be said, "and there is no question

The White House repudiated Mr. Miller's comments on Friday.

Chrysler Paid $23.6 Million to Iacocca in Year

Compiled by Our Staff From Desp DETROIT - Chrysler Corp. paid its chairman, Lee A. lacocca, $14 million in salary, bo nus and stock in 1986, and he exercised stock options netting another $9.6 million, bringing his total compensation for the year to $23.6 million.

Donald E. Petersen, who led Ford Motor Co. past General Motors Corp. in profit for the first time since 1924, took bome a total of $4.3 million.

The figures were disclosed in proxy statements issued Friday by the companies. GM has said its chairman, Roger B. Smith, received $1.8 million in salary and bonuses for 1986. GM's earnings fell to $2.9

billion to 1986, from $4 billion to 1985. Ford's earnings increased to $3.3 billion, from $2.5 billion. Chrysler's earnings declined 14.6 percent to $1.4 billion from $1.64 billion. Mr. Iacocca, 62, is one of the highest-paid executives in U.S. corporate history. By comparison, the chairman of Federal Express Corp., Frederick W. Smith, received a $51.5 million package in 1982. (NYT, LAT)

A substantial part of the weakness in consumer spending has been the result of a drop in new-car sales compared to the last quarter of 1986, when buyers were flooding into auto showrooms to take advantage of the final opportunity to deduct sales taxes from their federal income taxes.

Although sales slowed sharoly in January, auto manufacturers kept production schedules higher for much of the early part of this year. Thus, a good part of the inventory accumulation was unsold cars.

The shift underscores what is tippening throughout the aero-space industry. Wall Street has grown wary of most companies that are highly dependent on government contracts. Such companies often experience boom and bust cycles caused by programs that go full tilt for years, then end abruptly.

"For defense contractors, the nightmare is always what to do when this contract runs out, to avoid falling into a black hole," said Wolfgang H. Demisch, an analyst at First Boston Corp.

In an era of little or no growth io the defense budget, contractors must look elsewhere for their own growth. Commercial businesses are me avenue. And within the mililary sphere, demand for sophisti cated electronic systems to guide and operate weaponry is increasing, spurring investments in that

About 18,000 Rockwell workers probably will have lost their jobs by the time the B-1 program ends And Rockwell has little prospect of winning another big military air-frame project soon.

Still, Rockwell faces the end of the B-I project in fairly good floancial shape. For its fiscal year ended Sept. 30, Rockwell earned $611.2 million. Revenues were $12.3 biltion. For its first quarter, Rockwell had net income of $149.4 million, br $1.05 a share, up 19 percent over the previous year. The company's stock, which was as low as $37 last year, traded to the high $50s last Rockwell also seems well situated strategically. Even without the B-1, it is flush with U.S. government business, including the space shuttle orbiter and main engines; research on the Strategie Defense Initiative, a plan for a space-based defense against nuclear missiles; and major satellite and missile contracts.

In addition to its growing military and commercial electronics business, the company makes a variety of industrial products including truck axles and Goss printing

A Section of The diversification has given Rockwell something of a split personality. It has two headquarters offices; one io Pittsburgh that was set up when the company specialized in industrial products, and a newer one at the edge of Los Angeles International Airport in El Segundo, near Rockwell's high-technology aerospace operations. Mr. Anderson works out of both offices while Mr. Beall is based in California. Although company executives say they will maintain the two headquarters indefinitely, El Segundo is where the decisions are

For the most part, those decisions have been the right ones, according to analysts and company executives. "Rockwell has positioned itself so it can look into that black hole and smile," Mr. Demisch of First Boston said.

Mr. Anderson said, "We're not gest was the $100 million purchase lation that Rockwell would like to going to be decimated. We have a of Electronics Corp. of America, get out of that business, but Mr.

> To make up for the loss of the Cproject, Lockheed is competing for other government contracts, including the next generation of air force lighter jets. Last year it also purchased Sanders Associates, a defense electronics company.

Rockwell's path toward diversification bas not always been smooth. The Apollo space program, for which Rockwell was B prime contractor, came to an end in the early 1970s. With less money coming in from NASA, Rockwell tried to apply its technological skills to co kills to consumer products.

In 1973, it bought Admiral Corp. on the theory that a company that Rockwell's Butomotive composent a man to the moon could build a better television.

The assumption was wrong. Few of Rockwell's skills transferred to while one of its biggest customers, the price-sensitive consumer marketplace. Under Rockwell, Admiral was able to build what it called "the Cadillac of televisions," but not at a price anyone would pay. Rockwell admitted defeat and sold Admiral in 1979. "We did our best

In addition, the government has asked Rockwell to build a space shuttle to replace the Challenger, which exploded in midair io January 1986. Work oo the $2 billion contract is expected to start later this year, just as B-1 work begins to tail off.

Two years ago, Rockwell spent $1.7 billion to acquire Allen-Bradley Co., a leader in factory controls and automation. Allen-Bradley itself has one of the nation's most advanced computer integrated manufacturing facilities. The company was close enough to Rockwell's commercial electronics business to be familiar, but it was also judged to be a fast-growing, nongovernment business that could expand even more rapidly with capital infusions from Rock-

Another big growth area for Rockwell has been satellites. The company is working on the largest satellite program ever, a $1.2 billion contract to build 28 Navstar navigation-guidance satellites for the U.S. Air Force.

. If the Strategic Defense Initiative moves from the research and development phase to deployment, Rockwell would probably get a big piece of that business as well.

On the low-technology side, its automotive components business has been suffering from weakness among its main customers, truck boilders. There is recurrent specu-

The oext major event anticipated at Rockwell is the passing of the baton from Mr. Andersoo to Mr. Beall. The men are in close touch and claim to think much alike. "We communicate in half sentences,"

Mr. Beall said. With the B-1 throwing off cash, Wall Street is wondering whether Rockwell might be looking for another big acquisition, But Mr. Beall said Rockwell was not planning another purchase unless an unexpected and perfect opportunity comes along.

Trading in Amsterdam last week began on a lackinster note, extending the previous week's trend as the dollar weakened.

Share prices generally tended lower, although there were several exceptions among stocks related to oil storage and harbors.

On Thursday, the final trading day, internationals were up slightly, but most prices were unchanged. The ANP-CBS share index closed at 286 points, down from 287.9 the previous

Hong Kong Hong Kong stocks lost ground last week, amid wornes about U.S.-Japan trade friction and the impact of the dollar's decline on the colony's import bill.

The Hang Sang Index closed Thursday at 2,721.12, down 45.29 points.

The market lost ground Monday and Tuesday in what dealers attributed to fears that Hong Kong's import bill may rise sharply as the dollar depreciates. The Hong Kong dollar has been officially pegged at around 7.80 to the U.S. currency since October 1983.

By the end of the trading week, bargain hunters had turned the market around to the point where it had recouped nearly half of its early 97-point drop.

Dealers said they expected the market to continue a modest upward trend this week.

although the U.S.-Japan trade dispute would again be a key factor.

London

After a weak start, share prices staged a technical rally last week on the London Stock Exchange, ahead of the Easter break.

The Financial Times industrial share index, which plunged to its lowest for more than 10 weeks early in the week, ended on Thursday with a net gain of 16.5 points, at 1,540.3.

Sentiment was initially overshadowed by the sharp decline in the dollar after news of the larger-than-expected U.S. merchandise trade deficit last month. But steadier conditions developed later in the week, helped by a raily on Wall Street, more stable conditions on currency markets, a batch of favorable economic forecasts and several opinion polls giving the Conservatives a sizable lead over opposition parties. Among companies reporting results, Blue Circle, Hawker Siddeley, Taylor Woodrow and

Milan stocks last week reached their highest point this year. The Comit Index moved upward during each of the five trading days, to close 4.2 percent higher at 755.92, after the previous week's finish of 725.01. Trading volume, which had been low the previous week, also rebounded. A total of 274 million shares changed hands, compared with the previous week's 166 million, for a value of 1.55 trillion lire, after 896 billion.

The strongest progression was in the industrial sector. Olivetti leaped 6.7 percent, while Fiat's ordinary shares increased by 4.4 percent and its preference shares by 5.6 percent. Mon-ledison rose 2.8 percent.

Even more startling was a mini-boom in insurance. Lloyd rose 14.7 percent and Ausonia 10.6 percent.

Schmidt's 500th: When It Counted

PITTSBURGH - Mike Schmidt hit his 500th bome run exactly the way he wanted — with two out in the ninth inning and the game on the line.

"You couldn't write a more perfect script," said Schmidt after his three-run homer Saturday gave the Philadelphia Phillies an 8-6 victory over the Pittsburgh

Pirates. "You would be hard-pressed to find one who hit a home run with a better storybook ending than that." "Without a doubt, it was the most exciting moment of my career," he said.

Schmidt, the 14th major-league player to reach the milestone, hit Don Robinson's 3-0 pitch on a line over the left-field fence. There was no doubt from the time it left the bal, and Schmidt stopped to watch the ball's flight before doing a slight hop, skip and jump around the bases. Coach Mike Ryan retrieved the ball in the bullpen and rushed it to Schmidt, who was mobbed at home plate by his teammates.

The Phillies trailed, 6-5, entering the ninth and Schmidt came to the plate with runners on first and third. He had been hitless in three at-bats with a walk as he stepped in to face Robinson, against whom he was just 7-for-57 in his career, with four home runs. Schmidt took the first three pitches — all just low — for balls. Then Robinson grooved a 3-0 fastball, and Schmidt's fifth homer this season produced his first game-winning RBI of the year. He said the only thing lacking was that No. 500 had not come at home. He had been booed by Philadelphia fans for years, but in recent seasons the faithful have come to revere their 37-year-old star, who says this may be his last year. Hank Aaron is the all-time home run leader in the major leagues with 755. CINCINNATI — Kurt Stillwell's first major-league home run, a grand slam, and Dave Parker's 250th career homer, a three-run blast, powered the Cincinnati Reds to a 9-8 victory Friday night over the Houston Astros in a National League game, Stillwell's homer to right field highlighted a five-run fifth inning off Houston starter Bob Knepper and reliever Aurelio Lopez that put the Reds ahead to stay.

The Astros were leading, 6-4, after Billy Hatcher hit a two-run triple and scored on Phil Garner's sacrifice fly in the top of the fifth. Then the Reds loaded the bases with none out on singles by Parker and Eric Davis and a walk.

> NEW YORK -- In his first full season in the major leagues. Bo Jackson seems to be making a splash - whatever he does.

"I got one thing to say, boys," said Jackson after striking out five times in five at-bats Saturday as his Kansas City Royals lost, 7-6, to the New York Yankees, "I stunk. That's haseball."

Jackson, who earlier this season had driven in seven runs in one game with a grand slam and a three-run homer, became only the 13th player in the 87-year history of the American League to fan five times in a nine-inning game.

He became the first member of the Royals to achieve the dubious distinction.

Jackson was also the focal point of a key ninth-inning play in which Dave Winfield ran from first to third on Gary Ward's single to short left field. Asked whether he expected Winfield to go to third on the hit. Jackson said, "No, but 1 had to make sure I got the ball. I had to set myself. It was wet out there." Ward went to second on Jackson's late throw to third. Subsequent walks to pinch-hitter Dan Pasqua and Mike Pag-liarulo forced Winfield bome with the winning run. Jackson left nine men on base with his five strikeouts. He entered the game with a .452 batting average, three bome runs and a league-high 13 RBI

WASHINGTON — "By no means was it really teed up for him." That phrase, teed up, was used by then-White House chief of staff Donald T. Regan in testimony before the Tower Commission. I defined it to mean "spelled out, as if to a child or someone unfamiliar with the language; explained so that under-

Not his meaning at all, Regan corrects me. Although he has saved for his memoirs any ripostes to backstabbing from the East Wing, he has taken pen in hand to set straight for future historians and committee chairmen a couple of matters linguistic.

"Since I play golf as often as possible," he writes about teed up, "but never as much as I want, I was using it in a true golf sense. To tee up the ball means for someone to put a tee (peg) into the ground and place a ball on it. All the golfer then has to do is hit the ball (assuming he has the capability)."

Regan interrupts himself to reminisce: "In the old days, a caddy actually used to tee up a ball for his player. I must add, though, today one usually has to tee up one's own ball, due to the lack of caddies."

"I was trying to tell the commission," he continues, "that the issue had not been really defined well enough to be ready for the president. Later, we did discuss in more detail the downside risk of revolation of swapping arms for hostages."

Let the record show that tee up, which to some linguistic duffers means "spell out patiently," means to others more adept with a niblick "define for decision." (To tee off, in golf, is "to begin play"; in slang, it has become a cuphemism for a mild vulgarism meaning "to upset or irritate." DONALD REGAN was not the only former serviceman to take issue with some of the terms discussed in philological analysis of the Tower waver. A broad-side from Old Salts has been followed by an invasion of my mailbox by irate grunts, or infantrymen. Subject: etymology, inaccurate or incomplete, of terminology, military. (That's how to write in service ese: always follow the noun with a comma and the modifier. The War Department bought a billion extra commaseduring World War II, and the Defense Department is determined to use them up. Hence signs like 'Garbage, inedible.")

"Add this to the pile of letters you are receiving about overhead," writes Garland Hicks of Mount Kisco, New York, referring to my definition of this term as "roof"; I had assumed to go through the overhead was a simple variant of to go through the roof. In the Navy, the stairs are the ladder; the floor is the deck; the wall is the bulkhead; and the ceiling is the

I didn't get a Bravo Zulu for that; in fact, my explanation of this phrase as radio phonetic code for job well done" was shallow. The Naval Institute in Annapolis, to which I had turned for guidance in this, came sailing back with this added thought from Cap-tain Jim Barber, its executive director: "B-Z is one of the two-letter designators for specific flag hoist/flash-

Aha! It comes from semaphore and the use of flags to indicate letters; a phonetic practice was picked up by the radio operators from the wavers of signal flags.

The letter B can be signaled by a solid red flag, which by itself stands for "Take care, ammunition is being" taken aboard." The hoist of B over Z meant "job and done"; now the question is why that particular cities.

ations ago, B over Z was expressed as Baker Zebral when North Atlantic Treaty Organization code changed Baker to Brave the meaning of "job will done" was reinforced and passed into the everyday speech of military bureaucrais.

The question arises: What is the opposite of Brand dressing the issue, "is what you'd part of the property of the company of t Zulu? "The Delta flag," says Captain Barber, not quite addressing the issue, "is what you'd want to show to indicate trouble." In the International Code, the letter U is used for "You are standing into danger" and the delta (D) means "Keep clear of me. I am maneuvering with difficulty." However, whenever you ask anybody in Amanolis. or at the Pentagon for the code that is the precise. opposite of Bravo Zulu, you get a lot of double talk. about secret codes. Is there no signal for "Boyobided did you botch that!"? Must the signal for criticismide classified as secret?

Here's the real story, which you will not find in any reference book or secret NATO code, and which has been passed to me from a non-Annapolis source strictly for non-attribution: the phrase used in blister. ing criticism is Delta Sierra. The closest I can come to giving its meaning in this space is "dumb stunt," which disgruntlement through the grunts, was the metaphoric origin of stay off the skyline, meaning "try to average publicity" or "keep out of sight."

Want sent infancy are through the overhead of

"The phrase has nothing to do with a city skyline or a skyline chart," writes Allan W. Cameron of Washington. "It has to do with making oneself a target or drawing fire." He recalled the Bill Manldin cartoon of a young officer standing erect on the top of a ridge; a doughface on the ground asks him, "Sir, do ya hafta draw fire while yer inspirin" us?"

draw fire while yer inspirin' us?"
United States Army Field Regulations, page 33 of the 1914 edition, has this citation sent in by John G. McGarrahan of New York City: "Troops on outpost keep concealed as much as is possible ... especially do they avoid appearing on the sky line". In the Korean conflict, the phrase was better known as

Don Regan tees that up best of all: "When one goes through combat-patrol work," he writes, "one quickly learns that the best target is the person who stands on the skyline.' Indians knew it, Indian scouts knew it, soldiers, sailors and all Marines know it.

"I might add, a chief of staff is supposed to know. it," concludes Regan, with what strikes me as a note of rue, "but sometimes there is no way a chief of staff can stay off the skyline."

Barbara for the season. I wanted to work. So two days later, I called Köchli, and here I am."

Despite Köehli's attitude, Verses noted that some Toshiba riders' wives preferred not to have her massage their busbands. "That's OK," she said, "because there are plenty of riders to go around." For most races, the team uses three soigneurs, who massage the same riders each day of a race even as long as the three-week Tour de France.

The major object is to remove toxins from the muscles and thus speed a rider's recuperation from the day's trials. A secondary goal to relaxing the rider physically is to soothe him emotionally, "If he wants to talk about the race, I'll talk with him," Verses said. "But if he doesn't, I don't. Some days it's psychotherapy, some days silence. Sometimes laughs, sometimes not.

One real problem is how shy a rider can be before be gets to know you. I say to them, 'Take off your underwear.' They look sort sports trainer ("football, basket-of funny and say, You want me ball, volleyball, baseball, as the to take off my underwear? And then I say, 'You want your butt massaged, take it off.'
